

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A lure for use when angling with a fishing rod and line. The lure has a first structural member and a second structural member, said structural members enclosing at least one cavity, having a volume which is variable by means of a relative movement between the structural members, said relative movement bringing about a change of displacement of the lure.